The University of Minnesota–Twin Cities is built within the traditional homelands of the Dakota people. Minnesota comes from the Dakota name for this region, Mni Sota Makoce—the land where the waters reflect the skies. Each day students, faculty, staff and community members who use our services look out our windows to the Haaha Wakpa, the River of the Waterfalls. The Circle of Indigenous Nations recognizes the original peoples of this place and makes ongoing efforts to educate the campus community about the ongoing relationship that Dakota people have to this area.
